Letter to Members

Dear Members and Friends,

We are pleased to report that 2017 was a very eventful and successful year for the Oregon Historical Society. One of the highlights was our exhibit, High Hopes, celebrating the life and legacy of President John F. Kennedy. This original exhibition attracted visitors from across the country and the world—including President Kennedy’s daughter, Ambassador Caroline Kennedy, who inspired a sold-out audience of nearly 3,000 with her remarks on the importance of studying our history.

High Hopes was the fifth exhibit developed by the Oregon Historical Society featuring Portland businessman and OHS trustee Pete Mark’s world class collection of historical treasures. Sadly, Pete passed away on June 1, 2017 at 91 years of age after a remarkable life of accomplishment. OHS will always remember his friendship and generosity—and continue his legacy, and that of other dear friends we lost in 2017—by preserving and sharing Oregon’s story with future generations.

2017 was also a year of progress for our FORWARD! capital campaign. Just a few weeks ago, we said goodbye to our popular Oregon My Oregon exhibition after a successful fourteen year run. Construction has already begun on our new permanent exhibition, Experience Oregon, which is being developed with a diverse group of stakeholders to present Oregon’s vast history through broad perspectives. Gifts to the FORWARD! campaign make this important renovation possible, and we are excited to debut this state-of-the-art exhibition on Oregon’s 160th birthday, February 14, 2019.

We also made great progress on the second goal of the campaign with the launch of OHS Digital Collections. Since the site went live last May, over 15,000 photographs, oral histories, and manuscripts have been digitized and made available to the public, with new content being added weekly.

Architectural plans are being finalized for our Research Library, which will undergo a renovation beginning in 2019 to create a more inspiring and productive space for historical research and preservation work. Through FORWARD!, we continue to raise funds for all three of these initiatives, as well as build endowments that will secure our accomplishments into the future.

We invite all of you to join this important campaign, which will ensure that Oregonians always have access to history that enriches our lives and informs our decisions. Thank you for your continued support and for helping put the power of history into everyone’s hands.

Best regards,

Kerry Tymchuk
Executive Director

Carl Christoferson
President, Board of Trustees
The Oregon Historical Society is lucky to have over 100 volunteers helping out in a variety of ways. Learning about Oregon history, developing new skills, and contributing to the community are all aspects of volunteering at OHS.

The 2017 Outstanding Volunteer Award went to George Smith. George has been processing OHS’s institutional archives for the past few years. He has a wide-ranging and deep knowledge of history and an uncanny ability to make important connections with the seemingly disparate materials. His work has been—and will continue to be—instrumental to the preservation and understanding of the history of our organization.

In June 2017, OHS lost dear friend and trustee, Pete Mark. “Pete’s love of history was undeniable, and through his collection he gave visitors to the Oregon Historical Society the once in a lifetime opportunity to see artifacts and documents that shaped our nation,” said OHS Executive Director Kerry Tymchuk. “OHS, the City of Portland, and the State of Oregon are all better because of his leadership and generosity.”

Six frowzy headed fishers in a pose
Portland Public School Lantern Slide Collection, OHS Research Library, Box 3
This photograph is one of over 15,000 items now available through OHS Digital Collections. Brothers Fred H. (1878–1955) and Oscar H. Kiser (1883–1905) started photography as a hobby. Fred went on to gain recognition as one of the most successful commercial photographers and one of the best artistic mountain photographers in the nation during the first quarter of the twentieth century. As the official photographer for the Lewis and Clark Exposition in 1905, Fred gained a wide audience. His photographs helped promote Crater Lake National Park and establish Glacier National Park. Through his Kiser Photo Company, he produced and sold prints, albums, stereographs, postcards, and glass lantern slides, such as this image of Mt. Hood from Bull Run Reservoir.
OHS gained new collection items from the American Textile History Museum in Massachusetts, which closed. This cardboard sheep features a blue Pendleton label and was probably used during the 1970s for advertising. By transferring locally made artifacts during the 1970s for advertising. By transferring locally made artifacts to the Oregon Historical Society, the museum was able to find a new home for some of their collections.

OHS Launches Digital Collections

While there is nothing quite like putting on a pair of white gloves and getting lost in a file of old black and white photographs, the digital age has brought to screens in homes and classrooms materials in libraries and archives from all over the world. Following current trends among archives to provide broad, open access to collections, the Oregon Historical Society launched OHS Digital Collections in May 2017 as part of the ongoing FORWARD! capital campaign.

With this new website (digitalcollections.ohs.org), researchers, scholars, artists, and students can now explore thousands of historical images, manuscripts, and oral histories from the Oregon Historical Society Research Library’s collections. Since launch, over 15,000 items have been added to the site, with new material being uploaded for public access each week.

This resource will become more and more useful across the state and beyond as the FORWARD! campaign provides funding for equipment, facility upgrades, and services. New equipment, including large format and film scanners, will be used to digitize fragile items such as architectural plans and maps as well as motion picture film. Beyond providing critical collections access, the preservation systems implemented behind the scenes will safeguard these priceless collections for generations.
A Year In Review

The Oregon Historical Society Research Library and Oregon State University Libraries’ Special Collections and Archives Research Center collaborated to make more than 40 years of photographs, manuscripts, publications, correspondence, and other materials created by William Finley, Irene Finley, and Herman Bohlman available online. This digitization effort, completed in June 2017, allowed the collection, which is physically divided between OHS and OSU, to be united in its entirety for researchers and conservationists to access in a single digital space.

The Oregon Historical Quarterly marked its 117th year with not one, but two special issues! In the spring, OHQ was transformed into the Jefferson Historical Quarterly for a special issue featuring essays, articles, and research files that explore the history of southwest Oregon and northern California. The winter 2017 special issue examined the ways human migration has shaped the state, covering the experiences of Tribes accessing their ancestral lands, Roma (gypsies) in Oregon, Mam refugees from Guatemala, and African Americans migrating from the South and Midwest.

The original exhibition, High Hopes: The Journey of John F. Kennedy, marked the fifth in a series of exhibits inspired by the Mark Family Collection. One hundred years after the death of our 35th president, visitors flocked to OHS in near-record numbers to view this stunning collection of artifacts and manuscripts.
May 20, 2017 marked the official launch of OHS Digital Collections. Now with 15,000 items, this incredible portal into our research library continues to grow and provide unprecedented access to our photographs, oral histories, and manuscripts.

On September 19, 2017, Ambassador Caroline Kennedy gave an inspiring talk to a sold out audience at the Arlene Schnitzer Concert Hall. Here she poses with Oregon political powerhouses Attorney General Ellen Rosenblum, Representative Suzanne Bonamici, Governor Barbara Roberts, and Governor Kate Brown.

The 3rd annual Night at the Museum event hosted by OHS ambassador board, The Cabinet, raised over $10,000 and brought new faces into the museum for a night of food, dancing, and tours of High Hopes.

In October, OHS honored iconic Oregon business Reser’s Fine Foods, Trail Blazers announcer Bill Schonely, surgical oncologist Dr. Nathalie Johnson, and Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist Nicholas Kristof at the 9th annual History Makers Dinner, raising over $300,000 to support operations.

Our Mission

The Oregon Historical Society preserves our state’s history and makes it accessible to everyone in ways that advance knowledge and inspire curiosity about all the people, places, and events that have shaped Oregon.
